TRAVELER LOST.

d For a Week to Terrible Privations

a Man Dies After Rescue. CKENRIDGE, Col., Aug. 20.-0 O. Lee left this city August 10 for Silver Pass over Argentine Pass. He reached the top of the range about dark and missed the road at a very dangerous place, and by following an abandoned trail undertook to cross a broken bridge. Missing his footing he was precipitated to the bottom of the gully, a distance of 25 feet. An arm was broken and both legs were broken in two places. In this condition the traveler sined on the mountain for a period of six days and six nights without od or drink, exposed to the severestorms which have prevailed during the entire month. On the sixth day a traveler happening to cross the range found the man ous, but unable to speak, as his tongue was so swollen as not to permit arlation. After giving the sufferer a drink of water the rescuer went for assistance a distance of fifteen miles and on his return found the man still alive, but unconscious. He was borne to a carriage and placed upon a comfortable cushion and the painful journey to medical aid be-gan, but before they had gone five miles

Killed by Mexican Soldiers.

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Aug. 20.-Saturday two respectable Mexicans, citizens of this county, named Fernando Mentz and Juan Dorolos, tried to run the quarantine into Matamoras by swimming the river below Gales. They were fired upon by Mexican soldiers concealed in the bushes on the other side and Dorolos was shot and sank. Mentz escaped. The man killed was trying to get into Matamoras to see his brother, who was sick and at the point of EXPLOSIVE COAL-DUST. Suggestions in Explanation of the Majority Prof. Arnold Lupton, in a lecture delivered under the auspices of the coal mining department of Yorkshire colliery, at Leeds, England, said that in the case of colliery explosions it had been taken for granted that firedamp or marsh gas was the cause, and the eyes of inquirers had been closed to every other cause. French mining engineers appeared to have been the first to suggest coal dust as a cause of explosions, but in 1876, Mr. William Galloway, then her Majesty's Inspector of Coal Mines, sent a paper to the Royal Society, in which he gave the evidence of experiments and investigations, to prove that coal dust was the prime agent of destruction in colliery explosions. This paper he followed up with others. Other mining engineers then took up the inquiry; the Royal Accident Commission, Prof. Abel, the Prussian Fire-Damp Commission, and others, made experiments; but to Mr. Galloway belonged the chief credit of the discovery that coal dust is the main agent in colliery explosions. The experiments and investigations proved that very fine coal dust stirred up with air was explosive, and also that coal dust not so fine was explosive in an atmosphere containing only one per cent. of gas, a percentage too small to be detected by the ordinary methods. He then, with the aid of numerous diagrams, described a numcoal fields in Glamorganshire, Derbyshire, Yorkshire, Durham and Scotland. He said that with the knowledge now gained it was easy to understand disasters that were incomprehensible on the assumption that firedamp was the cause. The Parks explosion in 1866 was probably a coaldust explosion, so was the Queen Pit, Haydock and many others. Some of these pits he had himself explored a few hours after the explosion. At Seaham Colliery the force of the explosion of coal dust was probably equal to the explosion of 90,000 pounds of gunpowder. He then proceeded to describe the cause of coal dust, and the means of laying the dust by highpressure water jets and other means;

Outward Trappings of Woe Which Can Be Treated with Caustic Ridicule. There are certain aspects of "Christian burial" which have grown so discordant with our more intelligent forms of social life that they have become even ludicrous, and can, therefore, be most wholesomely treated with the caustic of ridicule. The most conspicuous of these is covered and described by the comprehensive name of "mourning." I have heard a brilliant society belle sorrowing bitterly over the fact that, just as her most impressive costumes were prepared for a season's campaign, the demise of a distant relative made it necessary for her to "go into mourning"-a fact which had but the one compensating circumstance, that "black was becoming to her." In all the large cities stores may be found where the mortuary expert can determine to a shade the style of dress that constitutes "full mourning," and where the length of a vail is solemnly regarded as expressive of what Mr. Mould termed "filial affection." There is "mourning jewelry," "mourning visiting cards." "mourning stationory," "mourning etiquette," and I knew of one gentleman who carried his loyalty to these "modes and shows of grief' to the extent of having the blue ribbons that adorned his nightgown solemnly replaced with black! But the ghastly humor reaches its climax in the contemplation of "halfmourning," or "second mourning." This symbolizes sorrow vanishing through the ministration of the milliner and the mantua maker! It is an interesting but certainly not an edifying sight to see a blooming young widow pass through those various stages of grief which rigid etiquette demands, from the midnight gloom of costly crape, through the subdued twilight of "second mourning," back to the full daylight of gorgeous color.
